NORWAY AND VICINITY

Adkins-Schneider.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Otto Schneider was the scene of a very pretty home wedding, Wednesday afternoon at 2:30, when their daughter, Alice Louise Ernestine, was united in marriage to Harlow Daley Adkins of Portland, Ct., by Rev. M. C. Ward, pastor of the Universalist church, assisted by Rev. C. E. Angell of Freeport.

The ceremony was performed under an evergreen arch in the presence of the immediate relatives and friends. Fannie Boynton was the bride's maid and wore a handsome gown of yellow silk, batiste over yellow and carried yellow roses. Frank Young was best man.

The bride was charmingly gowned in white laces with lace trimmings. She wore a bridal veil and carried a white prayer book. The groom wore the conventional black.

The bride's gift to the bride's maid was a handsome cross set with pearls and the bridegroom's gift to the best man was a very pretty scarf pin set with pearls.

At 5 o'clock a wedding reception was held at the bride's parents' and a large number of friends were received. In the receiving line were the bride and groom, Mr. and Mrs. Otto Schneider, Mr. and Mrs. Perley Adkins, Fannie Boynton and Frank Young.

Refreshments of barlequin ice cream, cake, fancy crackers and punch were served. Music was furnished by an orchestra.

Mr. and Mrs. Adkins were the recipients of many handsome and useful presents which included cut glass, silver, hand-painted china, old ivory china and linen.

After the reception the bridal party went to South Paris and left on the afternoon train for Portland.

Mr. Adkins is the youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Otto Schneider, and has always resided in Norway, where she has a large circle of friends. She was graduated from N. H. S. in the class of '07. She has been for some time a teacher in the Universalist Sunday school and superintendent of the J. Y. P. C. U.

Mr. Adkins is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Perley Adkins of South Paris, where he resided until coming to Norway some few years since and was engaged in the jobbing department at the shoe shop. Last fall he went to Connecticut, where he is engaged as carpenter with Frank Barker.

Mr. and Mrs. Adkins will make their home at Portland, Conn.

W. C. T. U.

The March meeting of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union will be held with Mrs. George Pike, Pastor as Subject: Neal Dow and Mrs. L. M. N. Stevens. Time: March 1, at 2:30 p. m.

This meeting will be on the first Wednesday because the annual supper and sale will be on the second Wednesday.

Will all who have W. C. T. U. books loaned by Mrs. Charles F. Barnes, please return them at once to Mrs. Robert J. Bruce.

Two Games of Basket Ball.

Two games of Basket Ball will be played at the Opera House, Friday evening, Feb. 24. The games will be between the South Waterford and Norway Regulares, and the South Paris Sophomores vs. the Norway High. The games begin at 7:45 and will be followed by dancing. Stereus orchestra will furnish the music.

Lizzie L. Johnson, went to Falmouth, N. Y., Thursday, where she will spend several weeks with her brother, Rev. W. L. Johnson.

At the annual assembly of Oxford Council, No. 14, R. and S. M., at Mason's hall, Friday evening, March 17th. Right illustrious Grand Master James H. Withersall will be the feature. In addition to the usual business refreshments will be served.

H. D. Billings, son of S. K. Billings who owns the bungalow Billikins on the lake here, is at the home in Newtonville, Mass., for three or four weeks. He has been in Texas since July as a civil engineer. He had entire charge of the survey for a big irrigation scheme which will cost when completed four or five millions of dollars. Now the firm are to make a survey for a system of service to a large city in northern Texas and is to have charge of the same. His friends here will be pleased to know he has such a fine position.

The Thomas Smiley smoke and water sale, Saturday, called out a big crowd and all day there was a large number of people, mostly ladies, in front of the entrance door, estimated five hundred, more or less, most of the time. This is a large store and two hundred inside would not overcrowd it. The large force of special clerks handled the rush sales well and the entrances were well policed. There was no trouble or accidents. At the closing hour Saturday night, much of the goods damaged was sold to apparently satisfied buyers. The when all the damaged goods were closed out. The annual reduction sale still continues. Probably never in the history of Maine has two such large damage sales for two weeks in succession been held in any place.

Foster damaged goods were all cleaned up the Monday afternoon following, and the Thomas Smiley damaged goods the Wednesday afternoon following Saturday.

Farm and Garden

NORTHERN GRAIN APHIS.

Michigan Authority Believes Its Bark Is Much Worse Than Its Bite.

Probably the most misleading insect on the grains if not on the farm is the common northern grain aphis. It collects during some seasons in great numbers on the heads of wheat, rye, barley, oats, sorghum and other near relatives of the grass family, sometimes fairly packing full the spaces in the heads of these plants and seeming to threaten their very existence. This gathering in great numbers usually occurs just as the grain is in the milk. In all the instances seen by the writer, R. H. Pettit of the Michigan experiment station, the threatened injury has been averted by tiny parasites, which have destroyed the plant lice and reduced the loss to a nominal one.

The northern grain aphis appears very much like other plant lice, both winged and wingless forms being found. The color is green with black markings. The illustration gives an idea of its appearance under a strong lens. Before the grain commences to ripen the parasites usually commence to destroy the lice. These parasites are black for the most part and about one-tenth of an inch in length. They move about with a quick, nervous motion. They lay their eggs in the living bodies of the lice. The grubs or larvae from the eggs feed on the body contents of the living lice, and when full grown each spins a cocoon inside the skin of the dead house, swelling it to a pear shape and changing the color to a brown or copper tint. After pupation occurs inside this cocoon the parasite cuts a neat circular door in the skin of the house in order to get out.

The multiplication of the plant-lice is rapid indeed, but that of the parasites is still more rapid, so that before the grain is killed the lice are for the most part destroyed. Of course this may not always occur, but so far the writer's experience with them has been that their bark is far worse than their bite.

Cultivating the Corn Crops.

The essential thing in corn cultivation is to keep the ground free from weeds and covered with a soil mulch. The results of fifty-six different tests at seventeen different agricultural experiment stations show an average increase of 42 per cent resulting from shallow cultivation as compared with deep cultivation. In most years cultivation is of less importance than in dry years.

Agriculture in a High School.

The Stockton (Cal.) board of education proposes to introduce agriculture at the opening of the fall term of its high school and to "teach all the high school sciences from an agricultural standpoint."

Right!

The man who spends much time in his garden or orchard or field won't have to spend much time in the market when he gets ready to sell.

FOR THE THINKING FARMER.

Examine the crowns and roots of peach trees for borers. A mass of gum is an indication of the insects. They can be dug out with a knife and destroyed. A fine wire will also get them out.

When planting large, flat seeds set them in the ground edge-wise. Germination is more certain.

Two experiment stations—Kansas and Nebraska—have had satisfactory results from seeding a mixture of alfalfa and brome grass for permanent pastures. The presence of the brome grass so reduces the danger from bloat that the value of alfalfa pastures becomes available.

A good seed, good culture, good crops and good farmers go together. Don't bank on luck.

New land will always raise a crop, but it takes care and labor to keep old fields productive.

The man who plows with a purpose will always beat the man who sputters without planning.

Every farmer should do all he can to make farm life attractive for his children so they will not desire to leave the farm.

Some farmers are too busy in their cornfields to stop and read the papers and miss the item telling how to double the crop.

A better way is to rest and read an hour at noon. Such time is never lost.

Standard time was established by agreement in 1883, primarily for the benefit of the railroads.

Abolish Taxes in Farmington.

No taxes will be levied in Farmington village next year. The town of the municipality will be met by the surplus earnings of the water works system, which the village corporation owns. This decision was reached at the annual meeting of the village corporation recently. The water works system earns more than $5000 a year. Several methods of disposing of this surplus had been advanced. The assessors recommended that the rates of water rents be reduced on an average of 30 per cent., but the meeting decided to use the surplus for sunning expenses and let the rates remain. The meeting raised the salaries of the assessors, clerk, treasurer, water superintendent and night watchman substantially. The assessors were authorized to contract for 50 electric street lights of 100 watts, to run all night.

FUNGUS POTATOES.

Old Disease That is Caused by Too Much Wet Weather.

Last July and early in August we had considerable wet weather. The potato tops suffered badly from a blight. However, the vine recovered sufficiently to mature a fair crop. All through the winter the query was, "What makes the cooked potato have such a sweet taste?" And again on cutting the tuber a brownish streak or blotch appears all through the tuber, resembling a marble cake. This is seated mostly beneath where the eyes are and about one-eighth of an inch from the surface. The potato shows no outward sign of disease except that the eyes do not push as rapidly on a diseased potato as they do on one free from it. These streaks are about one inch long and one-fourth inch wide.

The query was, "What caused that peculiar streaking in the tuber?" In looking over a history of fungoids and fungus disease of the potato we find that a very similar condition existed in Ireland in 1845, resulting in a great potato famine there. That year was a very wet year, and the natural moist climate of Ireland gave a great impetus to this disease. It has not reappeared to any great extent till last year. It bears no resemblance to the potato scab either on the tuber or the foliage. In this disease the leaves turn a brownish black color and drop off, while the stalk or stem may retain some vitality even to sending out duplicate leaves, though much smaller. The disease is, however, carried down to the tuber and is seen there as described. In dry seasons or in dry sections no alarm need be felt as to the disease spreading, but in low moist sections care should be exercised.

Affected tubers should by no means be planted. Varieties resisting blights in general are safer for planting so as to be sure that this peculiar blight gets no hold. In some parts of Europe it is bad, and no doubt but that it has been introduced into this country from there. A few years ago we received from England some varieties, but nothing wrong was noticed at that time. Should the disease appear on the foliage sprayings of Bordeaux should be given every ten or twelve days through the season.—National Stockman and Farmer.

Found to Be Capable of Doing Well in Eastern Orchards.

English walnuts are a welcome addition to the winter dinner bill, and many of them are eaten in New England. Few are the New Englanders, however, who have ever seen English walnuts growing. A Boston Globe correspondent sent in two photographs of walnut trees of the English variety raised in this country, with a note from the raiser of the nuts, Norman Pomeroy of Lockport, N. Y. "Few people realize," wrote Mr. Pomeroy, "that English walnuts can be grown extensively in the eastern part of the United States, and only by the merest accident was it found that they could be. My father, Norman Pomeroy, visited the Centennial exposition, and, noticing a tree in the yard where he boarded at Philadelphia bearing nuts, gathered about a peck of them and brought them home with him. Some children found a small hole in the corner of the valves and got out all the nuts but seven. These he planted, and they sent up shoots that grew into fine large trees, which bore well. Some more trees were raised from this acclimated stock, and we now have a fine young orchard. Quite a number of our neighbors also raise walnuts from this stock."

GREEN WALNUTS.

Purpose of Stirring Soil. A newly stirred soil admits the air to the roots, conserves moisture and prevents the growth of weeds. Every shower tends to seal up the surface and exclude the air. So aim to stir up the soil after every rain.

Thousands of Dollars Wasted. Small grains should be shocked securely. Thousands of dollars are lost every year on account of poor work in shocking grain. Brace the sheaves firmly and press the heads together closely at the top. When well braced, cap to cover the grain and protect it from rains, storms, and depredations of birds. See that the shocks are put up in good condition for curing.

Farm and Garden

DOUBLING THE CORN YIELD.

Every Farmer Can Breed Better Grain, Says Wisconsin Authority.

If it is possible to increase the yield of corn from ten to thirty bushels per acre we should all be made aware of that fact in the shortest possible time, for it makes a great difference to the farmer who is on high priced land, whether he is growing thirty-five bushels of corn per acre or sixty, says Professor R. A. Moore of the University of Wisconsin, writing in Farm and Fireside.

A large portion of the advanced yield of corn in Wisconsin has been brought about by using definite select breeds of kiln dried seed that has high energy and vitality. Better culture has of course contributed to the result.

We cannot emphasize too much the importance of having seed corn grown in close proximity to where it is to be used. It usually takes several years' continual growing before corn becomes thoroughly acclimated to the surrounding environment of soil and climate, and if a radical change is made the corn will deteriorate.

As far as possible every farmer after getting started with highly bred seed should grow and develop his own seed from year to year. His first efforts should be toward selecting for an ideal corn plant. He should have in his mind those special characteristics he desires to perpetuate. Such ideal corn plants are to be found in his general field. Their selection is the first step in corn breeding.

In order to do this well the farmer should go through the field, following definite rows, at a time when the plant will show its general characteristics to the best possible advantage. This is usually when the corn is in the milk, as then the leaf, ear and stalk can be studied to good advantage. We should select a medium stalk which puts out one good ear about three feet above the ground. The stalk should have numerous broad, healthy leaves.

When the ideal stalk is found it should be marked so as to recognize the plant after the corn has ripened. After the first plant is found other plants are selected that conform closely to the first selected stalk. In this way 200 or 300 stalks are marked, and after the corn is well ripened the ears from them are picked and husked. The ears that are not uniform in character are rejected, and only those that show good type are saved for the second year's work. These ears should be thoroughly cured and put away where mice will not molest them or where they will not be subject to frequent variation in temperature.

The second step in corn breeding is known as the ear to the row method of breeding. For this we use the ears selected the previous year. The ears are tested for germination and only the strongly germinating ears kept. Of these the butts and tips are rejected, and the middle two-thirds of the ear is generally used.

Ground should be selected upon which similar crops have been grown from year to year so that the soil will be in a uniform condition. Each ear is planted in a separate row until 50 or 100 ears are used. The hills are an equal distance apart, and the same number of kernels, usually three, are planted to the hill.

The outcome is astonishing. Some of the ears of corn planted have the energy, vitality and projected efficiency to produce as much as ten times the amount of select seed corn that other sister ears are able to produce. The rows that are to be the heavy yielders of good seed corn early become noticeable for the general uniformity which they hold throughout the entire row.

The next year's seed corn should be secured from these high yielding rows, and it will transmit this special function of yield and perfection of ears to its progeny of the next year's crop.

In some instances every alternate row is detasseled, so as to prevent close fertilization, and the seed corn selected then from the detasseled rows.

Good seed corn does not, of course, guarantee good crops. Poor soil poorly cared for will give a poor crop no matter how good the seed is. But using good seed you are sure good care will not be wasted by the failure of the seed in germinating or breeding power.

Thousands of Dollars Wasted. Small grains should be shocked securely. Thousands of dollars are lost every year on account of poor work in shocking grain. Brace the sheaves firmly and press the heads together closely at the top. When well braced, cap to cover the grain and protect it from rains, storms, and depredations of birds. See that the shocks are put up in good condition for curing.

Our motive in utilizing our advertising space in this unique manner, is to thank the public for its generous patronage in the past and to explain to our patrons certain details in connection with our "Gigantic Smoke and Water Sale." A portion of our merchandise being damaged by smoke and water, on Saturday, February 18, 1911, we held our Sale.

For several days previous to the day of the sale, we received checks in our mail orders and were requested to send the merchandise which we had advertised in our Sale, and many people asked our sales-force to save it for them, but in neither case was any one shown a preference. We had decided at the beginning to use for our motto, "Justice to all; Partiality to None," and we lived up to our motto. To have shown preference to mail orders or to any special persons, would not have been justice to our customers who had driven many miles, from many counties of our own State and from New Hampshire, in order to attend our sale. We had advertised to open our Sale at 8 a. m. on Saturday, February 18, 1911 and no goods were saved out or sold before that hour. All mail orders that came after that hour received as prompt attention as was possible considering the hundreds of people that thronged our doors, waiting for admission.

No word could better express the magnitude of our sale than the word "Gigantic", which we chose. At one time during the day the crowd of people waiting outside our doors was estimated at upwards of five hundred people, and the throng of customers inside was estimated at better than two hundred, so it will readily be seen that even with our special force of twenty odd clerks, there was plenty to claim our attention. Policemen were employed to prevent accidents in the rushes when the doors were opened and every precaution was taken that would in any way aid us in making it convenient for our customers. A large force of extra sales people were employed in order to wait on the customers as promptly as possible. We made every preparation in behalf of our customers' interests, sparing neither pains nor expense, so that everyone will always say that, "Smiley's Gigantic Smoke and Water Sale", was a "Square Deal."

Barbarism of Hunting.

By many men and boys it is deemed great sport in displaying skill in taking the lives of birds and animals. To follow hounds and other dogs of the chase through field and wood, and bring to earth victim after victim, and win unerring shots, is deemed a fascinating achievement.

Ad hunters often witness the killing of innocent victims, and see the suffering and agonizing death of birds and animals that dearly love their lives, and have done their hunters no harm. Most huntsmen of kindly nature tell you that at times a feeling of self reproach has passed through them as they stood by the dying victims of their skill.

Hunters of elk, deer and antelope can tell you of seeing the terror-stricken eyes of those animals, filled with tears, gazing at them with mute reproach as they sobbed their lives away, and deprived of all power to wreak vengeance on their human aggressors. Such memories as these should haunt men who are not hardened or calloused with savagery.

Time and again we have seen lordly animals in their native state, peaceful, happy, and seemingly enjoying to the full the gifts of life, wounded or killed at the pulling of a trigger. If such animals are wounded, they are relentlessly pursued, and a day for hours or days suffer agony before death closes the suffering.

Hunting is a relic of barbarism of man's nature. One of the most pitiable sights is to see life pass out of the innocent, quivering, helpless grouse, quail, dove or other birds. Often these scenes are witnessed by the cheerful and laughing hunters, who, when beating out the brains of the birds that sharply cry and cling to life.

The more humane and civilized man becomes, the more he will despise the killing for fun. Such amusement marks the low savage instinct. Not even a proud and great nation can dignify the mock heroism of killing "big game." The man of genuine sympathy and kindly disposition can only feel disgust at the sight of killing these unoffending innocents.

The Funny Pair "Come Back."

Amos and Pete Revisit Boston Journal Readers.

Thousands of readers who used to turn at once to Amos and Pete in the columns of The Boston Journal will be glad to learn that they will again greet Journal readers, and that their amusing adventures will be a daily and Sunday feature of The Journal.

This laughable series proved conclusively that cartoons can be clean and yet be funny. This characteristic made them acceptable to every member of the many families reached by The Boston Journal. Many thrilling escapades for this pair of clowns are promised by their creator, C. L. Sherman, and those who follow their career in the future may do so with undiminished interest.

The instructive woman's page, the up-to-date financial news, the timely editorials, and the comprehensive sporting chat—all will continue to be daily features of The Boston Journal. These, added to the regular news features of the day, make The Boston Journal the paper for every member of the family, the great home paper of New England.

If This Medicine Does Not Benefit You Pay Nothing

A physician who made a specialty of stomach troubles, particularly dyspepsia, after years of study perfected the formula from which Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets are made.

Our experience with Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets leads us to believe them to be the greatest remedy known for the relief of acute indigestion and chronic dyspepsia. Their ingredients are soothing and healing to the inflamed membrane of the stomach. They are rich in peptone, one of the greatest digestive aids, known to medicine. The relief they afford is almost immediate. Their use with persister and regularity for a short time brings about a cessation of the pains caused by stomach disorders.

Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets will insure healthy appetite, aid digestion and promote mental animation. As evidence of our sincere faith in Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets, we ask you to try them at our risk. If they do not give you entire satisfaction, we will return you the money you paid us for them, without question or formalities. They come in three sizes, prices 25 cents, 50 cents and $1.00. All the Speed He Wanted.

"Drive like the deuce!" shouted Smith springing into the taxi.

With a lurch the car darted forward, and away they went like lightning in the fog. Crash! They came off the wheel of a passing wagon. "Hi! They missed flattening out a small child by two-thirds of a hair. Clang! They upset a milk cart. People shouted, 'contaminated impotently held up their hands as the taxi dashed up one street and down another, taking corners at two wheels and threatening every lamp post with destruction.

At last after half an hour's furious racing, they slowed up in a narrow thoroughfare, and Smith poked his head out of the window.

"Are we nearly there?" he asked breathlessly.

The chauffeur turned in his seat and shouted:

"Where did you want to go, sir?"

An Animal Story For Little Folks

THE GIRAFFE AND THE ELEPHANT

One day the giraffe and the elephant met on a plain by the side of the river Nile. It was a warm day, and they were both rather out of sorts and inclined to be discontented.

"I agree with you," said the giraffe hotly. "We were made to be perfect sights. Why, in the name of goodness, we were not made better looking I can't for the life of me see. Look at my 'rubber' neck. It's so long and ugly that I feel uneasy whenever I go out in society. Why, I can't find a place in all Egypt where I can get a collar to fit me, and even if I could, I could not get money enough together to pay for having it washed. Everywhere I go all the rude animals yell out 'Rubber!' I declare, I don't see why I couldn't have been made right and not with a neck like a stepladder or a flagpole."

"True, true," said the elephant sadly. "And just look what a sight I am. It's bad enough to be covered with a hide like leather, all wrinkled and ugly, without having to have a tail put on my front end as well as my rear. What a bore it is to have to carry one's trunk around, even when not at the seashore, but in one's own home."

"I don't see," cried the elephant, switching his proboscis angrily, "why they ever made us such frights!"

But just then it was dinner time, and both were hungry.

Mr. Giraffe reached gracefully up with his long neck and took a mouthful of sweet palm-fruits.

"Goulch!" he roared, "that without your long neck!" said Mr. Elephant.

Then he reached down and got a good wisp of rich grass and put it into his little mouth. "Couldn't have done that without your trunk," said the giraffe.

"True," said the elephant. "I guess we weren't made so badly, after all."

Kept Him Waiting.

The Scotch clergyman who invented the percussion lock for firearms in 1805 had to wait twenty-seven years before it was tested by the British government; thirty-two years before a regiment was armed with it and thirty-four years before it was used in war.

Mt. Washington Will Shine.

Electrification for Hotel and Railroad With Searchlight for summit.

Because it is easier to send the wherewithal of light, heat and power on a copper wire stretched over the ascent of Mt. Washington than to tug coal in box cars up the Jacob's Ladder grade, the new hotel which is to cap New England's highest summit will be electrically equipped in every detail. The cooking will be done by electricity, besides the heating and of course the lighting.

The incand railroad, which was originally one of the wonders of mountain engineering, will be transported into an electric road and otherwise modernized. The power station for all these purposes will be sheltered in an obscure spot at the foot of the mountain.

The new hotel will have a searchlight so powerful that it can be seen for a hundred miles. It will be used evenings to entertain the guests of the hotel by illuminating the gorges and gulfs of the mountain as well as bringing into view the surrounding villages, nestling picturesquely under the great hills.

It has been reported that the hotel on the summit, which was destroyed by fire a few years ago, would not be rebuilt. But the New Haven management, on taking active control of the Boston & Maine, concluded that to give emphasis to this mountain top would have advantages apart from the mere question of profits and losses of the hostelry. It will now become one of the famous hotels of the country, with its marvellously complete electrical installation and its undisturbed scenic attractions.

People will be interested to visit a hotel which, but for the open fireplace, would be chimneyless. The electrification of the railroad will make the trip vastly more pleasant than it has been in the past, with the flying cinders, peevish aiming at the widely opened eyes of the eager tourist who usually rode on the outside to see the whole show. But the electrically illuminated mountain will, it is believed, induce many of them to remain over night.

Humor and Philosophy

By DUNCAN M. SMITH

WORKING IT OUT.

FACTS are very stubborn things.
Though we try to pull the strings
That will bend them to our will.
They are facts, not fancies, still.

We may warp them just a bit
So they will fit our purpose fit.
But they slip back in their tracks
When we get right down to facts.

If they were but thus and so
We might stand a better show
And could make things come our way
In the game we try to play.

But they do not budge an inch.
Though we stretch them at a pinch.
They recoil within our hand
Like a fragile rubber band.

It is very sad indeed.
Though some other facts we need.
There they stand through thick and thin
With a most annoying grin.

And it useless is to kick
On a hard, unfeeling brick
Or to claim that east is west
If that suits our purpose best.

We must look them in the face,
Though they do not suit our case
And may cause our props to fall.
They are there, and that is all.

Finer Grade.
A smooth spoken gent dropped into a quiet village from nowhere, but as he slung around such a lovely line of conversation nobody asked for references.
Soon he was running the band and the
baseball team and leading a class in Sunday school.

Everybody said, "He is a brick."
Some months later he departed with a neat roll stowed away in his jeans.
The villagers had for their a nobly lot
of stock, that was beautifully engraved, in a rubber plantation. The months came and went. The sun rose,
carved across the sky and set many
times, but the promised dividends
never came. But still they were loyal.
They rose up as a man and reaffirmed
their belief in him, only putting it stronger.

"He is a gold brick," was what they
said.

Waiting Their Turn.
"They tell me that in some restaurants they serve rabbit for chicken."
"That is true."
"And squirrel for rabbit."
"Very likely."
"And what is the substitute for
squirrel?"

"There is none. But never fear but something will be found should they become popular as an article of diet."

Place of Honor.
"I suppose you are the head of your
own house?"
"You bet! I am president of the matrimonial firm."
"And your wife?"
"Hub! She's only the cashier."

Insurmountable Objection.
"How do you like your new boss?"
"All right but for one thing."
"What's that?"
"He is the boss."

Both Rich.
"What are you
making?"
"Failures. What
are you?"
"Same thing."

Difference In Feeling.
"When I grow up to be a man,"
Said little Willie Jones,
"I'm going to be a president.
I feel it in my bones."

"When you grow up to be a man,"
Said little Tommy Brown,
"I think I feel it in my bones
That they will turn you down."

PERT PARAGRAPHS.

It would be all right to make haste
slowly if that were the way haste is made.

We are getting older every day, but so are the rest of human creatures, so what's the difference?

The reason why there are so many persons dead sure that they know how
to run the world is because they never
have a chance to prove themselves
wrong.

We have to do some things because
we want to and a lot of others because our better half wants to.

We are always waiting to get an opportunity instead of going out and
making one out of hand.

You can't tell much by its shabbi-
ness how much money a purse has carried in its time.

There are a lot of people who are
much more expert at taking an order
than they are about delivering the goods.

We like to have our own way, but it does look unlovely to see others insisting in season and out of season up-
on having theirs.

Next to having a very excellent reputation comes having one that makes
people afraid of you.

Every day somebody discovers a new
way to make a fool of himself.—Chicago Record-Herald.

FROM THE TROPICS TO HEAL US

In Central America many natives are
gathering the seeds of this plant, Cedron
Seed, a rare medicine that has valuable curative powers. But few drug stores
carry this seed, owing to the high cost
of the article.

This country is a large consumer of
this costly seed because it enters into
the famous catarrh remedy, Perna,
sold the world over.

Boulder Painting.

How and Why This Was Done by Indian
Maids.

In olden times the Indians were
accustomed to paint curious characters
upon boulders. We found many of these painted boulders in the Thompson
Indian country. The drawings were red and were probably made with a paint composed of red clay mixed with grease. These drawings are said by the Indians to have been executed by the young Indian girls as part of their initiation into the society of the women of the tribe.

Such initiations took place at about
the age of fourteen, and were accompanied by a long series of rites. Some of these were intended to develop patience, endurance, and courage. For instance, patience was taught by requiring the girl to pick the needles one by
one from many boughs of the fir tree
and by obliging her to paint these curious characters, which are, also symbols of her experiences during the initiation ceremonies.

Endurance was taught by fasting,
which often lasted a number of days.
Courage was tested by nightly vigils in lonely spots, such as cemeteries. Another feature in these initiations was purification. This was accomplished by refraining from eating certain things, isolating
one's self in the forest, and by vigorous bathing.

The sweat house was used for bathing.
It was a small hut or framework of sticks
covered with fir-boughs and earth, or
with the skins of animals. In the floor
was dug a small hole to receive stones
heated in fire outside.

Upon these heated stones water was sprinkled, and the subject, while reclining on a thick bed of fir-boughs, enjoyed a steam bath comparable to our Turkish bath. After this she rushed out and plunged into a cold mountain
stream.

LIFE SAVED AT DEATH'S DOOR.

"I never felt so near my grave," writes
W. R. Patterson, of Wallington, Tex., "as when a frightful cough and lung trouble pulled me down to 100 pounds, in spite of doctor's treatment for two years. My father, mother and two sister died of consumption, and that I am alive today is due solely to Dr.
King's New Discovery, which completely cured me.

Now I weigh 187 pounds and have

Husband Had No Memory.

When John Kendrick Bangs lectured for the University Extension Society, in Witherspoon hall a few days ago he told a story of a woman whose husband had recently died, and who was receiving the sympathy of her neighbors.

ment as a token of respect for your hus-

gested, and the widow shook her head.

ory."

PUTTING AWAY OF FURS.

How to Protect Them From Moths
During Summer Months.

When furs are not in constant use,
as in the summer time, they should be kept in air-tight cotton or heavy paper bags. Hang where they will not be forgotten. They should be examined weekly. Very handsome furs, especially long coats and rugs, should be sent to a professional packer who keeps them in cold storage. See that each piece is well tagged. There are women who fear to send their furs away lest they do not get the same pieces again. This is unheard of with a reliable firm, but marking will settle all doubt.

If home storing is in order make a study of it. See that all furs are clean before putting away. If much soiled rub warm dry bran into more durable furs, while cornmeal or powdered magnesite may be applied to sable, ermine or chinchilla. When very dirty the meal can be mixed with gasoline. Brush carefully.

In cleaning furs do not be too vigorous. Hanging on a line and beating will usually result in torn skins. If any beating is needed it is better done on a flat surface. In brushing use a thick, not too stiff, brush, parting the hair evenly and getting at the pelt.

To remove any cleaning meal a man's hatbrush is excellent.

Sun and air all furs for a week before packing. Comb carefully. Work with the nap of the fur, never across
it. Be sure there are no moth eggs in the fur before beginning to pack.

Small furs should be wrapped in newspapers—moths hate printer's ink—then be sewed up in a clean piece of linen or cotton and later put into a heavy paper bag, which is sealed across the top.

With this treatment many successful packers use neither camphor nor moth balls. These preventives should not go near the fur, as they discolor.
The fearful may sprinkle them in top and bottom of paper bag as a precaution.

Each set of furs when wrapped
should be returned to its own box,
which is clearly marked to save trouble if hurried, unpacking is necessary.
Where one owns an old trunk or chest
the various boxes can be stored and looked in it. This lessens possibility of theft.

Fur rugs after careful cleaning
should be wrapped first in several layers of newspapers, then covered with bags of brown muslin and an extra covering of heavy brown paper. Stow them on floor of vacant room or where there will be as little creasing as possible.

Fur coats are packed on their hangers. It is a mistake to put them back in their boxes. Don't use a wool padded hanger. A stout wire or wooden one is best. After careful sunning and brushing button the front of coat, then cover the entire garment with three layers of newspaper. Pin up the paper at top and bottom to shut out air.

Next cover with a bag of dark muslin and one of heavy brown paper. These bags should be drawn very tight around the neck of clothes hanger.
Many have strips of paper pasted on top for extra precaution. Lump camphor, tar balls, cedar shavings or other moth preventives can be slipped in top of bag.

One housekeeper packs her less expensive furs by putting them back in their own boxes and tucking layers of newspaper around them, the last layer soaked in turpentine. Moth balls are put on top of papers, and the lid is sealed with strips of paper.

SIMPLE CORN CURES.

How to Relieve Oneself of Troublesome Afflictions by Simple Methods.

With proper attention and suitable footwear children should not be afflicted either with callous spots or corns. Nevertheless children often do suffer with both. In such case one of these three sure, safe and simple remedies will be found satisfactory:

Peel and chop very fine two small white onions and apply directly to the afflicted part by means of a firm bandage. Leave on overnight and next morning bathe the foot in very soapy warm water. Repeat for three nights.

Bind half a prune from which the pit has been removed with the soft inner side upon the corn and leave overnight. Repeat three or four nights.

Thoroughly soak a thick slice of white bread in strong, undiluted vinegar, tie this poultice firmly over the callous place for the night and in the morning bathe the foot in sudsy warm water. Repeat one or two nights.

How to Make Your Skin Rosy.

The girl who is persistently pale in spite of dieting and exercise will find a pleasant way of making her skin
rosy by the following simple method:
Dip the finger tips into warm honey,
massage this well into the face, massaging the sticks also, but gently; wipe off the sticky feeling with a clean damp cloth and dash cold salt and water, a teaspoonful of salt to a pint of water, over the face for ten minutes, then dry well. This acts as a tonic to the skin, giving it color and freshness.
The skin, however, should be well protected from cold winds immediately after such a bath.

is a general insecticide for all leaf-eating insects. It is superior to many other brands on the market, because it contains the arsenic in exactly the right proportion and the proper chemical combination, thus insuring a material that will not injure or scorch the foliage but is sure death to insects feeding on the leaves. It is extremely miscible in water and will combine readily with Lime-Sulfur and Bordeaux Mixture. Light in grav-

Humor and Philosophy

By DUNCAN M. SMITH

WORKING IT OUT.

FACTS are very stubborn things.
Though we try to pull the strings
That will bend them to our will.
They are facts, not fancies, still.

We may warp them just a bit
So they will our purpose fit.
But they slip back in their tracks
When we get right down to facts.

If they were but thus and so
We might stand a better show
And could make things come our way
In the game we try to play.

But they do not budge an inch,
Though we stretch them at a pinch.
They recoil within our hand
Like a fragile rubber band.

It is very sad indeed,
Though some other facts we need
That they stand through thick and thin
With a most annoying grin.

And it useless is to kick
On a hard, unfeeling brick
Or to claim that east is west
If that suits our purpose best.

We must look them in the face,
Though they do not suit our case
And may cause our props to fall.
They are there, and that is all.

Finer Grade.
A smooth spoken gent dropped into a
quiet village from nowhere, but as he
slung around such a lovely line of conversation nobody asked for references.
Soon he was running the band and the
baseball team and leading a class in Sunday school.

Everybody said, "He is a brick."
Some months later he departed with a neat roll stowed away in his jeans.
The villagers had for theirs a nobly lot
of stock, that was beautifully engraved, in a rubber plantation. The months came and went. The sun rose,
carved across the sky and set many
times, but the promised dividends
never came. But still they were loyal.
They rose up as a man and reaffirmed
their belief in him, only putting it
stronger.

"He is a gold brick," was what they
said.

Waiting Their Turn.
"They tell me that in some restaurants they serve rabbit for chicken."
"That is true."
"And squirrel for rabbit."
"Very likely."
"And what is the substitute for
squirrel?"

"There is none. But never fear but something will be found should they
become popular as an article of diet."

Place of Honor.
"I suppose you are the head of your
own house?"
"You bet! I am president of the matrimonial firm."
"And your wife?"
"Hub! She's only the cashier."

Insurmountable Objection.
"How do you like your new boss?"
"All right but for one thing."
"What's that?"
"He is the boss."

We'll Have One on the Creditor.
Both Rich.
"What are you
making?"
"Failures. What
are you?"
"Same thing."

Difference in Feeling:
"When I grow up to be a man,"
Said little Willie Jones,
"I'm going to be a president.
I feel it in my bones."

"When you grow up to be a man,"
Said little Tommy Brown,
"I feel it in my bones
That they will turn you down."

PERT PARAGRAPHS.
It would be all right to make haste
slowly if that were the way haste is
made.

We are getting older every day, but so are the rest of human creatures, so
what's the difference?

The reason why there are so many
persons dead sure that they know how
to run the world is because they never
have a chance to prove themselves
wrong.

We have to do some things because
we want to and a lot of others because our better half wants to.

We are always waiting to get an opportunity instead of going out and
making one out of hand.

You can't tell much by its shabbi-
ness how much money a purse has
carried in its time.

There are a lot of people who are
much more expert at taking an order
than they are about delivering the
goods.

We like to have our own way, but it
does look unlovely to see others insisting in season and out of season up-
on having theirs.

Next to having a very excellent reputation comes having one that makes
people afraid of you.

Every day somebody discovers a new
way to make a fool of himself.—Chicago Record-Herald.

FROM THE TROPICS TO HEAL US

In Central America many natives are
gathering the seeds of this plant, Cedron
Seed, a rare medicine that has valuable
curative powers. But few drug stores
carry this seed, owing to the high cost
of the article.

This country is a large consumer of
this costly seed because it enters into
the famous catarrh remedy, Peruna,
sold the world over.

Boulder Painting.

How and Why This Was Done by Indian
Maidens.

In olden times the Indians were
accustomed to paint curious characters
upon boulders. We found many of these painted boulders in the Thompson
Indian country. The drawings were
red and were probably made with a
paint composed of red clay mixed with grease. These drawings are said by the Indians to have been executed by the
young Indian girls as part of their initiation into the society of the women of
the tribe.

Such initiations took place at about
the age of fourteen, and were accompanied by a long series of rites. Some
of these were intended to develop
patience, endurance, and courage. For instance, patience was taught by requiring the girl to pick the needles one by
one from many boughs of the fir tree
and by obliging her to paint these
curious characters, which are also symbolic of her experiences during the initiation ceremonies.

Endurance was taught by fasting,
which often lasted number of days.
Courage was tested by misty visits in lonely spots, such as cemeteries. Another
feature in these initiations was purification. This was accomplished by refrain-
ing from eating certain things, isolating
one's self in the forest, and by vigorous
bathing.

The sweat house was used for bathing.
It was a small hut or framework of sticks
covered with fir-boughs and earth, or
with the skins of animals. In the floor
was dug a small hole to receive stones
heated in fire outside.

Upon these heated stones water was
sprinkled, and the subject, while re-
clining on a thick bed of fir-boughs, enjoyed a steam bath comparable to our Turkish bath. After this she rushed out and plunged into a cold mountain
stream.

ing with some reliable material.

SHERWIN-WILLIAMS NEW PROCESS ARSENATE OF LEAD

is a general insecticide for all leaf-eating insects. It is superior to many other brands on the market, because it contains the arsenic in exactly the right proportion and the proper chemical combination, thus insuring a material that will not injure or scorch the foliage but is sure death to insects feeding on the leaves. It is extremely miscible in water and will combine readily with Lime-Sulfur and Bordeaux Mixture. Light in gravity, it remains well in suspension so that a uniformly poisonous spray can be thrown from the finest nozzle. For prices and further information on this product, come in and see us.
